Eligibility

Native American Graduate Fellowships will be awarded to outstanding Native American and Alaska Native graduate students who are currently pursuing advanced degrees in health care fields—including, but not limited to, health administration, health education, public health, medical practice, policy, research, or related degrees—and who have demonstrated a commitment to Native health care. Native American Graduate Fellows must have completed at least one semester of graduate-level coursework in a health care field and must be in good academic standing and enrolled at least half-time (as defined by their institution) for the 2023-2024 academic year. 2023 Native American Graduate Fellows must not graduate prior to May 2024.

The Udall Foundation must be notified of any changes in enrollment status or other significant changes impacting a Native American Graduate Fellow's ability to complete the Fellowship period.

Fellowship Awards

The 2023 Native American Graduate Fellows will receive a monetary award of $25,000.

- Fellowship payments are made directly to Native American Graduate Fellows, not to educational institutions.
- Native American Graduate Fellowships may be used to fund academic expenses such as tuition and fees, professional development expenses such as field work and conference attendance, and cost of living expenses for the Fellowship year.

Additional requirements are provided in the Native American Graduate Fellowship program's statement of terms and conditions.

Selection Criteria

The Native American Graduate Fellowship Selection Committee will evaluate each application using the following criteria:

- Applicant's personal commitment to Native health care and engagement serving Native communities.
- Applicant's scholarly excellence, experience, and qualifications.
- Applicant's potential to make a significant contribution to the field of Native health care.
- Letters of recommendation.

The Selection Committee will be comprised of distinguished Native leaders and professionals working in various aspects of Native health care. Applicants who advance to the finalist stage will participate in a video interview with the Selection Committee. During the video interview, finalists will deliver a short presentation on a Native health care topic related to their interest.
